

I only ever had one dream—my name in bright lights for the world to see. And I had a plan to make it all happen. Move to New York. Find an agent. Work hard. Then with a little luck mixed in with some natural talent, I'd be a Broadway star. One devastating injury and a broken engagement later, I have nothing to show for my life except an empty bank account and a jaded heart. Desperate to salvage my dreams, I agree to interview for a job with my best friend's brother, Gian Trassato. Gian is charming. He's magnetic. He's connected to the Trassato Crime Family, and everything I should stay away from, but I don't have a choice. I need the job. Just when I thought I was about to get my life and career back on track, I make one thoughtless mistake. I go back to the club to pick up my purse and witness something Gian's enemies would kill to keep secret. Now I'm being sucked deeper and deeper into a terrifying world I don't understand... Friends and enemies are interchangeable. Honor and family are everything. And the scariest part of all...I might actually be getting lost in Gian.
