

A Shaman's temptation could be the undoing of his people... Madeleine Greenway, perfectionist and analyst for Surety Bank, has no place in her rigidly organized life for something as unpredictable as a man, much less a Native American shaman. Sent to the White Mountain reservation to help the tribe finance its new casino, she meets Tak, a proud, beautiful Apache, and finds herself surrounded by something magical in the Arizona desert. His touch becomes a passport to otherworldly bliss, and the strange coyote she sees makes her question what's real. But it's the amazing sex with Tak that makes Madeleine lose sight of her goal—to guarantee that Surety Bank's investment in the casino won't fail. Last in a long line of shaman shape-shifters, Tak Nah-Kah-Yen has sworn a vow of celibacy to his gods. But Madeleine's lithe body and honeyed lips compel him to forswear his pledge, claiming her for his own. His passion for her overshadows his link to his gods at a time when he most needs their help. Desperate to find funding for the casino and lift his people out of poverty, he'd accepted start-up money from less than savory sources who are willing to kill to guarantee their profit—the profit Madeleine's bank jeopardizes...
