

Marietta Lawson is cute, sweet, curvy and very, very good at listening. She listens to everything she can, writes most of it down, and gives it to her boss. By day, Mari is the personal assistant to a billionaire pharmaceutical tycoon, but by night she's in the business – the very lonely business – of corporate espionage. Mari's come to grudgingly accept that spies don't usually have great love lives, and is pretty much done worrying about guys. That is, until during some idle employee database searching, she sees a new face that catches her attention. Damon Kelly is a hotshot, bad boy doctor-lawyer with wavy black hair, a sexy dimple, scorching eyes, and one hell of a secret. Caught red-handed in the middle of a job, Mari is more than a little surprised to find the guy she hasn't been able to get out of her head – Damon – with a gun pointed at her. Damon, for his part, can't believe that he's about to screw up the most important job of his career to take a chance on something as crazy as love. This standalone, steamy, sweet, sexy, fun erotic romance suspense isn't afraid to ask: Is it okay to throw away everything you know for one chance at a love you didn't even know you were missing?
