

From Best Selling Inspirational Romance Author- Grace Walton. The first novel in a new Contemporary Western series: Montana Miracles. Revised and updated May, 2015. Burnt Hickory, Montana, population 2,000 is the perfect place to live. At least that's what the Witness Protection folks claim. Carrie Smith isn't so sure. Four years ago she was a super model. Everything changed the day her father was murdered by a Mexican Drug Lord. Now she's a frumpy, quirky kindergarten teacher waiting to testify in a trial meant to win justice for her Dad. Gage Ferguson is a cynical, rich ex-Army Ranger who now runs his family's huge ranch in Burnt Hickory, Montana. He's a new Christian with a violent and promiscuous past. Never one to shy away from gritty reality, Gage is trying hard to change his ways. But circumstances just keep getting in his way. Sam Dole is everything Carrie wants. He's a handsome, responsible deputy sheriff, and a Christian. He's a pillar of the local church. He even sings in the choir. He's obviously deeply in love with her. How can a girl resist him? Sparks fly the minute Gage and Carrie meet in the small town's only elevator. Both decide to judiciously avoid each other. Then an old army buddy calls Gage asking for a favor. Could he, somehow, retrieve a kidnapping victim from the wilds of the Montana mountains? Carrie isn't sure which one of these two powerful, seductive men is a hero, and which is a villain. All she knows for sure, after she's kidnapped trying to save a class of schoolgirls, is that one is trying to kill her. And the other is trying to save her. Suspense builds as she plots to escape from a homegrown militia and testify at the Drug Lords trial. And she must make a heart-breaking choice. Probably the single most important decision of her life before she gets, Carried Away. Find your Happily Ever After in a Grace Walton novel.
